Apply active reading strategies...

- Consider reading the chapter summary for an overview of the main ideas.
- Turn chapter headings into questions.
- Apply concepts by providing examples.

Reading Does
Not Mean
Studying!

STUDY THE BOLD TERMS IN THE TEXT

- Create flash cards; go to www.Quizlet.Com to make index cards online.
- Use textbook's online companion site for self-testing.
- Provide examples of definitions to help with memory.
- Use mnemonics to help remember difficult or confusing terms.

COME TO CLASS PREPARED

Read textbook chapter or assigned reading before class.

Listen during lecture for clarification of information.

Stay current with readings to avoid cramming for exams.

BECOME AN ACTIVE LISTENER IN CLASS

- Come prepared with questions from the readings.
- Listen for answers to your questions.
- Take notes on what professor emphasizes in class.
- Ask questions or meet with professor after class or during office hours.

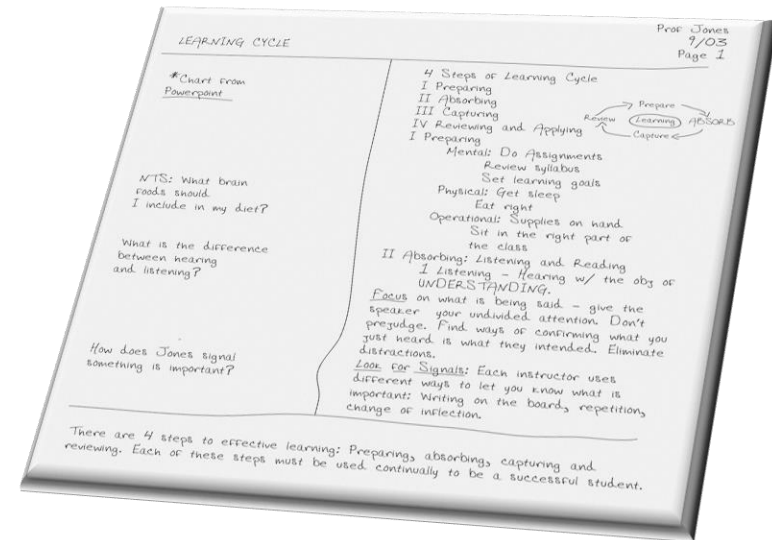

PLAN YOUR STUDY TIME

- Plan to study two hours for every hour spent in class.
- Study in a location that has few distractions.
- Set specific goals for each study session.
- Build in breaks in order to remain focused.
- Remember to self-test for mastery.

STUDY YOUR LECTURE NOTES

- Write questions in the margins and use to self-test.
- Practice paraphrasing your notes.
- Try to predict test questions based on your notes.

SELF TEST FOR MASTERY

- Use quizzes at the end of each chapter, in the on-line companion or on quizlet.com to test your knowledge.
- Self-test from your notes.
- Analyze your errors and adjust your preparation accordingly.
