Overview:

The American Red Cross Disaster Mental Health Volunteer of Greater New York resides at the intersection of trauma and tragedy. It is there that we engage individuals and families in an attempt to mitigate the pain and suffering associated with the disaster experience.

Trauma, loss and dislocation associated with house fires, hurricanes and wildfires to name a few, is where we employ our specific disaster skills to guide from loss and fear to hope.

The Greater New York Disaster Mental Health Team is a formidable cadre of professionals dedicated to the alleviation of emotional and psychological stress associated with trauma and tragedy.
